Approximate and all floor plans and development plans are subject to change. Stated square footages and dimensions are measured to the exterior boundaries of the exterior walls and the centerline of interior demising walls between units and in fact vary from the dimensions and definition of the "Unit" set forth in the Declaration (which generally only includes the interior airspace between the perimeter walls and excludes all interior structural components and other common elements). This method used herein is generally found in sales materials in the United States, units in other jurisdictions may vary. Measurements of square feet on this floor plan are generally taken at the farthest points of each living room (as described above) and are if the room uses a wedge-shaped area (such as a balcony) without a square area.
