Approximate and all floor plans and development plans are subject to change. Stated square footages and dimensions are measured to the exterior boundaries of the exterior walls and the centerline of interior demising walls between units and in fact vary from the dimensions shown on the floor plan. The "Unit" set forth in the Declaration (which generally only includes the interior airspace between the perimeter walls and excludes all interior structural components and other common elements). This method used herein is generally found in sales materials in the United States. Units in other jurisdictions may vary. Measurements of square footage on this floor plan are generally taken to the furthest points of each living space (see description above and as if the room were a perfect rectangle) without regard to the area of the walls, windows, doors, and other non-livable space.
